

Creating a performance analysis tool in Python

- during these tutorials we have used a set of tools written in C which measure, tcp, udp and nfs protocol performance
- your task, now, is to recreate similar TCP and UDP performance measurement tools in Python
- is there a noticeable performance penalty when implementing in Python as opposed to C?
 - is it noticeable on a wireless network?